INTRODUCTION

The Covid19 pandemic has redesigned our lives in terms of, what we shop, how we shop, how we work or even we bank. It has amplified the need for easy access to banking products services and information and suggests the need for stress free access to banking products and services.

The future of banking and finance industry will be driven by technology-oriented innovation along with increasing consumer expectation, regulations, economy changes and competition.

The pandemic has also shifted the focus towards sustainable development. The need to shift the from traditional concepts and theories towards the principle of sustainability was never felt so important as it is today.

Therefore, there is a need to evaluate and formulate alternative decision-making tools underpinning sustainable development solutions in the unfolding world following the Coved 19 pandemic.

At this backdrop, the Fourth International Conference on Banking and Finance intends to bring academicians, industry practitioners and research scholars on a single platform to deliberate on various issues related to banking and finance.
