10th International Conference on Global Business Environment

Conference Theme :
International Business
Diplomacy, Global Trade, and Economic Development in Developing Countries

Supported By:

January 24-25, 2025

The economic stimulants of globalization have grown manifold over time across the emerging trade opportunities, multi-domestic production matching consumer preferences in destination markets, and availability of international finance. In addition, the favorable political, economic, social, technological, environmental, and legal (PESTEL) factors have encouraged healthier local-global business relations. The business diplomacy and politico-economic shifts over the years have significantly affected the global business ecosystem and free flow of trade and logistics between the developed and developing countries. The favorable PESTEL factors encourage local firms in the developing countries to go global and stay competitive in the international markets. However, the global trade dynamics is largely governed by the political diplomacy across countries to motivate trade and economy. In view of the changing politico-economic relations, it is challenging for the firms of developing countries to maintain synergy in international trade and business decisions. Therefore, developing sustainable international market integration in the shifting political philosophies among the developed and developing countries is one of the embedded challenges in global trade.

The transcending information technology has made it easy for the firms to improve business networking and strengthen the cross-border trade and capital movements. Nonetheless, political and social differences often limit the international trade operations and business expansions. Developing nations with dynamic political leadership like India offer incentives to promote Foreign Direct Investment, manufacturing infrastructure, and economic benefit to drive local-global convergence in production and business operations. Most countries increasingly chose to liberalize the flow of products and services for the macroeconomic benefits. In the case of international marketing firms, the trade liberalization policies have opened up domestic markets for exports and imports encouraging even the small and medium firms to participate in the international marketing operations.

Multinational enterprises have often faced the risk of increasingly challenging global business environment involving government and non-government stakeholders, and multilevel institutional governance at macro, meso and micro levels covering global, regional, national, sub-national political and economic philosophy. These enterprises need to navigate through this complex environment by engaging themselves in a range of negotiations including various managerial practices collectively termed international business diplomacy (IBD). Under the pressure of IBD, most firms engaged in international trade tend to reduce the cost of business operations and their global risk exposure. Changing political philosophies, political polarization, and fragility in relationship across countries significantly affect the international trade and logistics among the international firms. Consequently, firms strive to develop tactical relations with the trade partners and the government to comply with the IBD led business regulations, to synchronize the business interests with governmental and other stakeholders and IBD norms, and to maintain their corporate reputation, legitimacy and trade operations.

Political and economic relations among the developed and developing countries help in architecting favorable business diplomacy, which contributes in boosting business negotiations and trade operations of international firms. Despite pro-trade regional diplomacy firm of developing countries often face increasing challenges from the governments. However, social institutions and tech-savvy NGOs raise public awareness through digital networks on an international scale. Governments tend to disrupt business ecosystem with bilateral economic sanctions in case of political disagreements, changing philosophies, and diplomatic relationship issues. Many emerging economies, notably China, have increasing influence on global politics and economics. It has been observed that in developing and transitional economies, the big-middle socio-economic demographic segment (Big middle consumers segment) provides greater commercial opportunities to multinational enterprises. However, promoting international trade in developing countries requires different approaches to both market and non-market institutions influencing governments and global stakeholders. Despite the changing business diplomacy and political alliances across the countries, the breadth and complexity of the global business environment have expanded dramatically, which require both regional and unilateral approaches over the bilateral political ties to enhance the international trade and logistics.

This conference intends to document the experience of firms, management process, and business systems that have co-evolved within the changing politico-economic ecosystems, and aligned with the agile business philosophy to attain competitive business performance. Deliberation in the conference aims at discussing the causes and effects and the challenges associated with the international business diplomacy, corporate governance, trade openness, economic growth, and process innovation in developing economies. Portraying the varied corporate experiences in governance across transforming business designs, stakeholder value propositions, and competitiveness across the industries, this conference deliberates on critically examining the political problems in trade and economy, challenges, and probable alignment strategies in managing PESTEL, ESG (environment, society, and governance), and the triple bottom line (people, planet, and profit). The policy frameworks for trade and economy connecting with the political philosophy and diplomacy, this distinguished academic convention is instrumental to drive a constructive debate on divergent aspects of global trade practices.

Bhubaneswar

Bhubaneswar is often called the ‘Temple City of the East’ and was once the capital of an ancient kingdom. The imposing spire of the Lingaraj Temple, the quiet beauty of the Viswa Shanti Stupa in Dhauli and the pink translucence of the Mahavira Jain Temple in nearby Khandagiri, inspire feelings of wonder at their sheer beauty and their cross-cultural permutations. The temples have stood testimony to the area’s history, which spans 25 centuries. The Lingaraj, the Parsurameswar, the Mukteswar and the Rajarani temples are unique in themselves, not only in their architectural beauty but also in the wonderful sculptures which enhance their presence.

Other Popular Tourist Places around Bhubaneswar:

Puri

The city of Puri is known for its history from time immemorial, Sanctum sanctorum of the Trinity, architectural magnificence, balance climate and divine significance. Counted among the most sacred pilgrim centers for Hindus in India, the destination is a seat of Lord of Universe, Jagannath, as per testimony of Skanda Purana. Honoured with the famous Jagannath shrine, the spiritual city is also known as Jagannath Puri. Besides, the destination is a repository of art and architecture of India with testaments dating back to 3rd Century B.C. This ancient town has ruins and testaments belonging to the period from 3rd Century B.C. to 17th Century A.D.

Chilika Lake

Spread over an area of 1100 sq.km, the Chilika is Asia's largest brackish water lake. Home of millions of colourful birds throughout the including migratory birds who descends on it from as far off as Siberia in winter and cavorting Irrawaddy Dolphins. Konark

The Sun temple at Konark, poetry in stone and a World Heritage Monument is often described as the grandest achievement of the Eastern school of architecture. This 13th Century AD architectural marvel in stone designed as a chariot of the Sun God with 12 giant wheels fixed on either side, whirled by seven horses in the translation of a Rig Vedic allegory in stone.
